

LED FACE MASK

CONCEPT SUMMARY

This high-empathy script builds profound psychological safety by opening with deep, unpolished vulnerability regarding the psychological toll of acne (cancelling plans, social anxiety). It validates consumer exhaustion by calling out the cycle of failed skincare spend before pivoting into a powerful Medical Financial Arbitrage angle: it positions a one-time $109 at-home purchase as the immediate, logical replacement for a recurring $600 clinical bill. The mechanism introduces blue light wave technology to prove it eliminates acne bacteria underneath the skin where topicals cannot reach, resolving the core problem through a risk-free 30-day trial.

Video Script Table

Time & Segment	Audio Script (Voiceover Copy)	Visuals & Text Overlays (TOS)
0:00 - 0:04 (Vulnerability Hook)	"My acne was affecting my life way more than I ever admitted out loud."	• Visual: Creator on camera. Close-up. Natural light. No makeup or minimal coverage skin concerns visible or recently healed. She looks directly into the lens. Expression is honest, slightly vulnerable. • Text on Screen: — • Editing Notes: The silence and the close-up framing do all the work. This must feel like the first sentence of a private conversation, not an ad opener. Do not add anything here.

0:04 - 0:16 (The Mental Toll)	"I was cancelling plans because I didn't want people to see my skin up close. I stopped taking photos. I'd walk into a room and immediately think everyone can see it. It sounds dramatic, but when your skin is bad every single day, it gets inside your head."	• Visual: Stay on her face. No cuts. She speaks without breaking eye contact. This section should feel like she's finally saying something she's kept to herself. • Text on Screen: — • Editing Notes: Still no music. Still no text overlays. The lack of production in this section is intentional; any editing feels like manipulation. Let her speak uninterrupted. The viewer who has felt this will not move.
0:16 - 0:26 (Skincare Fatigue)	"I tried everything. The cleansers, the serums, the prescriptions, the diets. Some things helped a little. Nothing actually fixed it. And I was spending so much money on stuff that just reset every month."	• Visual: Slight pull back, we see a little more of her now. Her energy shifts from heavy to frustrated. She gestures slightly as she lists. • Text on Screen: "Tried Everything. Nothing Worked." • Editing Notes: Soft music enters here very low, understated. Barely noticeable. It signals the emotional shift from pain to the search for a solution without announcing itself. Her frustration in this section should feel tired, not angry.
0:26 - 0:38 (The Financial Shock)	"My dermatologist eventually told me to try LED light therapy. So I did. I was going four times a week, lying in a light bed for ten minutes a session. Forty dollars every single time. I spent over six hundred dollars before I found out you could just... do this at home."	• Visual: Picture of her doing LED light therapy in a clinic. • Text on Screen: "$40 Per Session. $600+ Later." text appears as she says the number • Editing Notes: The "$600" figure needs a beat around it; a slight pause before and after in delivery. This is the financial shock moment, and it needs room to land. Her expression here should be somewhere between disbelief and relief.
0:38 - 0:50 (The Device Reveal)	"This is the LUMÉ LED Glow Mask. It has seven wavelengths; the blue light specifically targets the bacteria that cause acne. Not on the surface. Underneath. Where the actual problem starts."	• Visual: She holds up the LUMÉ mask at the first product reveal. Places it on her face. The LED lights activate. Cut between her wearing it casually at home and a close-up of the glowing mask. • Text on Screen: LUMÉ LED Glow Mask / Blue Light Targets Acne Bacteria / 7 LED Wavelengths • Editing Notes: Music lifts very slightly here, a warmer tone, not a full swell. The product reveal should feel like a discovery, not a commercial break. Keep her voice front and centre. The "not on the surface, underneath" distinction is the key mechanism line; it does not cut over it.

0:50 - 1:00
(The Proof & Payoff)

“Ten minutes a night. That's what I do now. And this is my skin. Same person. Six weeks later.”

• Visual: Skin close-up of her current skin, clear and even. She's not wearing much makeup. She touches her jaw lightly. Then back to full face on camera, visibly lighter energy.

• Text on Screen: Before / After flash 1.5 seconds of split screen, then back to her face / “6 Weeks. Same Person.”

• Editing Notes: This is the emotional peak of the ad. The before/after flash should be quick; it confirms what the viewer already suspects. Her face after the flash carries more weight than any graphic. The “same person” line is the emotional payoff. Let it land before cutting.

1:00 - 1:12
(The Close)

“I don't cancel plans anymore. That sounds like a small thing. It's not. If your skin is doing to you what mine was doing to me, just try it. Thirty days, money back, plus free shipping if you order today. Click the button below and grab yours”

• Visual: She looks directly into the camera. Calm. Genuine. This is not a sales close; it's the end of a conversation with a friend.

• Text on Screen: 30-Day Money-Back Guarantee · Free Shipping · Try LUMÉ Risk-Free →

• Editing Notes: No music swell for the CTA, keep the intimate tone all the way to the end. The “nothing to lose except the thing holding you back” close is the emotional anchor of the entire ad. She should deliver it softly, not with sales energy.

META AD COPY BLOCKS

Primary Text:

If you've ever cancelled plans because of your skin... this is for you.

I've been there too...

I used to cancel plans because of my skin. I stopped taking photos. I'd walk into a room and immediately feel like everyone noticed it first.

I tried every cleanser, serum, and prescription out there. Some helped a little. Nothing actually fixed it. And every month, I was starting over, spending money on things that just didn't last.

My dermatologist told me to try LED light therapy.

So I did, four times a week, $40 a session. Over $600 later, I found out I could do the exact same thing at home, thanks to LUMÉ.

Here's what makes LUMÉ different:

Instead of sitting on top of your skin like every cream and serum you've already tried, it uses 7 different wavelengths of light that each go to work on a specific layer of the problem.

The blue light goes underneath the surface and kills the bacteria living inside the pore, the ones starting the breakout before it even shows up.

The red light goes deeper than that, calming the inflammation that makes everything red and swollen, and telling your skin cells to repair themselves faster.

And the remaining wavelengths handle what's left behind the dark spots, the uneven tone, the redness that sticks around long after the breakout is gone.

Seven wavelengths, all working at the same time.

Just 10 minutes a night, and you stop cancelling plans.

With a 30-day money-back guarantee and FREE shipping today only!

Headline:	Finally Clear Skin Without the $600 Dermatologist Bill
Description:	Targets acne where it actually starts underneath the skin.
CTA Button:	Shop Now